St. John’s Hospital Family Medicine Residency Program offers robust training in inpatient medicine, obstetrics, and clinic-based care.

The clinic is located in a diverse, urban neighborhood in St. Paul. Patients include a well-established, ethnically diverse population, ranging from newborn to geriatric age.

St. John’s Hospital is a community-based, award-winning hospital. Family medicine is well respected and vital to the hospital’s success. The busy emergency room, ICU, and OB service complement the in-depth teaching services in internal medicine, newborn pediatrics, and general surgery.

Each academic class includes six residents. The program has filled in the National Resident Matching Program every year since 1990.

What Our Residents Say:

“The diverse, challenging patient population appealed to me. I also liked the small-town feel of the hospital with the urban clinic. I like that hospital call is full spectrum and similar to actual practice.”
